

Evening Telegraph

MONDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1864.

ARMY OF POTOMAC.

Advance of General Warren.

Rebels Completely Surprised—History of Our First Day's March—Skillful Manoeuvres by General Miles—Brilliant Exploit of Major Hogg—En Route for Weldon.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF POTOMAC, Dec. 9.—

The Great Expedition.

Our cavalry initiated the present great movement last night. Portions of the Third and Thirteenth Pennsylvania and Sixth Ohio Cavalry, under command of Colonel VINTON, of the Thirteenth, started early in the evening out on the Vaughn road. A short distance beyond our infantry pickets Colonel VINTON encountered the cavalry vultures of the enemy, but these retired steadily before him, and he continued cautiously advancing until he neared Hatchet's Run.

Hastily he instituted a thorough reconnaissance and became satisfied that the force of the Rebels, with a strong position, they occupied on the opposite bank, rendered an attack at that moment impossible. He therefore retired upon our lines, but before daylight this morning was again advancing in the same direction and upon the same road, but closely followed by the First Division or the Second Corps, the movement being now directed by General MILLS, commanding that division.

The Advance of Our Infantry.

The advance this morning, at first met hardly any more opposition than had the march of VINTON the night before. General MILLS found nothing to brush from his path but a skirmish line composed chiefly of dismounted cavalry, but he still discreetly kept the cavalry well to the front and flanks, and advanced slowly. About midday the Rebels had fallen back before Hatchet's Run, and the cavalry coming up on the Vaughn road crossed to cross.

Opposition Met.

The Rebels, however, were in strong position, the road was narrow, the ground on each side was thickly studded with mud-growth, and the Rebels had, moreover, dammed the run so that the water was more than five feet. These were insurmountable obstacles to the cavalry, but still our boys made at them.

An Attempt to Cross.

Captain WOODS, of Company M, Third Pennsylvania Cavalry, commanding the First, just above the road with two men, was killed, wounding him severely; a fresh recruit, and Edward COYLE, private of his company, also fatally wounded.

Advance of the Infantry to Cross.

General MILLS now advanced his First Brigade, under General MACY, and which came up under cover of the One-hundred-and-tenth New York, deployed as skirmishers. This regiment, pressing close down to the run, was a fair mark for the Rebels behind their breastworks, and sustained the principal loss of the day, amounting to some thirty men in killed and wounded. It was evident that the enemy thought to resist our crossing under the direction of General MILLER.

A Gallant Act.

Major BROWN brought up one gun of battery B, First Rhode Island Artillery, and, under its cover, the Second New York Heavy Artillery, were ordered to cross and gallantly did they. Major HOGG entered the water leading his regiment, and soon finding his horse swimming sprang from his back and struck out for the enemy's shore. He was the first to reach it, but his regiment followed hard after him finding somewhat shallower water, but wading to their arm-pits, but unfortunately losing two men by drowning.

The gallant Major HOGG waited until a portion of his regiment had gained terra firma, when he rushed them up the bank on the enemy's works and astounded the Rebels, who during this time had poured in several ineffectual volleys, and they stood not upon the order of their going, but went at once, leaving us in firm possession of the further side of Hatchet's Run. Meantime, the cavalry made a detour, and a little later crossed at Armstrong's Ford, and pushed on towards Gravelly Run, and reached and picked this latter water course, three miles beyond Hatchet's Run, without any do.

The Latest Reports.

Thus matters stand to-night. Our infantry advance at Hatchet's Run, our cavalry as far out as Gravelly Run, General MILLS having his headquarters at the Cummings' House on the Vaughn road, near the scene of HOGG's exploit.

The Losses.

The enemy's loss during the day has been of course almost nothing, his pedal minnows preventing us from taking many prisoners. The few we did pick up confirm the stories of deserts of last night, and all taken together we gather the comforting assurance that the Rebels are puzzled extremely by our present movements.

Rebels in Pursuit.

A. P. HILL's Corps was started off in haste yesterday morning, and last night was at Dinwiddie Court House, and there are reports that heavy fighting took place at that point to-day. How true this may be it is impossible now to determine, but it is certain that HILL is running a race with WADDELL, and has most probably been distanced.

Early Men at Richmond.

All of EARLY's army is gradually becoming visible in this latitude. GORDON'S Division turned up to-day in front of SMITH'S Brigade, Second Division Second Corps, and another division of the same force on the 25th.

From the Richmond Advertiser.

The only news from the tar South, on yesterday, was that FOSTER is renewing his demonstration against the Savannah and Charleston railroad, thereby seeking to divert the attention of a part of our troops from SHERMAN.

From the Richmond Advertiser.

The only news from the tar South, on yesterday, was that FOSTER is renewing his demonstration against the Savannah and Charleston railroad, thereby seeking to divert the attention of a part of our troops from SHERMAN.

Foster Again Active.

The only news from the tar South, on yesterday, was that FOSTER is renewing his demonstration against the Savannah and Charleston railroad, thereby seeking to divert the attention of a part of our troops from SHERMAN.

Gen. Butler's Advance.

From the Richmond Advertiser, Dec. 9.

We hear nothing more of the crossing of the enemy to the south bank of the James River, near Battery Howlett, and, therefore, believe it certain that if any force arrived at that point, it was an insignificant one, and not designed to effect any important result. From all we have been able to gather, we think it likely that a small party in boats, unengaged in the intestine, but perhaps numerous, of torpedo hunting, took advantage of the late Wednesday morning, and came down from Cox's Landing to the south bank, and, being soon when the fog had partially cleared away, their numbers were very considerably magnified, until they assumed the sound of proportion, with which it reached the city, namely, that a very large or the enemy had so come in making a landing between Roanoke and Drewry's Bluff.

Yesterday passed off quietly on the lines south of the city, the report circulated yesterday morning that a general battle was going on all along the lines being a rumor of that sensational clash that were very general and common some months ago, but which have of late been, we are glad to say, not often heard.

Another Raid on the Weldon Railroad.

Information reached the city yesterday morning that a force from GRANT's army had struck the Petersburg and Weldon Railroad at Jarratt's, thirty-two miles south of Petersburg, and were proceeding toward Weldon.

In the course of events, arrangements were made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor. Colonel MULFORD's fleet, comprising some eight or ten vessels, are now lying outside of the harbor preparatory to receiving prisoners. Another fair of ships will be sent out to meet the exchange, and the Yankee prisoners. A number of officers are on board Fort Sumter, will probably be exchanged and returned to us at the same time. Under arrangements made with the Weldon Railroad Company, the exchange will probably be made over to them.

Colonel HATCHET, to the outer buoy, where he was met by General Commissary last night at three o'clock.

The course was, arrangements were made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel MULFORD's fleet, comprising some eight or ten vessels, are now lying outside of the harbor preparatory to receiving prisoners. Another fair of ships will be sent out to meet the exchange, and the Yankee prisoners.

A number of officers are on board Fort Sumter, will probably be exchanged and returned to us at the same time.

Under arrangements made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel HATCHET, to the outer buoy, where he was met by General Commissary last night at three o'clock.

The course was, arrangements were made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel MULFORD's fleet, comprising some eight or ten vessels, are now lying outside of the harbor preparatory to receiving prisoners. Another fair of ships will be sent out to meet the exchange, and the Yankee prisoners.

A number of officers are on board Fort Sumter, will probably be exchanged and returned to us at the same time.

Under arrangements made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel HATCHET, to the outer buoy, where he was met by General Commissary last night at three o'clock.

The course was, arrangements were made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel MULFORD's fleet, comprising some eight or ten vessels, are now lying outside of the harbor preparatory to receiving prisoners. Another fair of ships will be sent out to meet the exchange, and the Yankee prisoners.

A number of officers are on board Fort Sumter, will probably be exchanged and returned to us at the same time.

Under arrangements made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel HATCHET, to the outer buoy, where he was met by General Commissary last night at three o'clock.

The course was, arrangements were made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel MULFORD's fleet, comprising some eight or ten vessels, are now lying outside of the harbor preparatory to receiving prisoners. Another fair of ships will be sent out to meet the exchange, and the Yankee prisoners.

A number of officers are on board Fort Sumter, will probably be exchanged and returned to us at the same time.

Under arrangements made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel HATCHET, to the outer buoy, where he was met by General Commissary last night at three o'clock.

The course was, arrangements were made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel MULFORD's fleet, comprising some eight or ten vessels, are now lying outside of the harbor preparatory to receiving prisoners. Another fair of ships will be sent out to meet the exchange, and the Yankee prisoners.

A number of officers are on board Fort Sumter, will probably be exchanged and returned to us at the same time.

Under arrangements made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel HATCHET, to the outer buoy, where he was met by General Commissary last night at three o'clock.

The course was, arrangements were made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel MULFORD's fleet, comprising some eight or ten vessels, are now lying outside of the harbor preparatory to receiving prisoners. Another fair of ships will be sent out to meet the exchange, and the Yankee prisoners.

A number of officers are on board Fort Sumter, will probably be exchanged and returned to us at the same time.

Under arrangements made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel HATCHET, to the outer buoy, where he was met by General Commissary last night at three o'clock.

The course was, arrangements were made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel MULFORD's fleet, comprising some eight or ten vessels, are now lying outside of the harbor preparatory to receiving prisoners. Another fair of ships will be sent out to meet the exchange, and the Yankee prisoners.

A number of officers are on board Fort Sumter, will probably be exchanged and returned to us at the same time.

Under arrangements made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel HATCHET, to the outer buoy, where he was met by General Commissary last night at three o'clock.

The course was, arrangements were made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel MULFORD's fleet, comprising some eight or ten vessels, are now lying outside of the harbor preparatory to receiving prisoners. Another fair of ships will be sent out to meet the exchange, and the Yankee prisoners.

A number of officers are on board Fort Sumter, will probably be exchanged and returned to us at the same time.

Under arrangements made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel HATCHET, to the outer buoy, where he was met by General Commissary last night at three o'clock.

The course was, arrangements were made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel MULFORD's fleet, comprising some eight or ten vessels, are now lying outside of the harbor preparatory to receiving prisoners. Another fair of ships will be sent out to meet the exchange, and the Yankee prisoners.

A number of officers are on board Fort Sumter, will probably be exchanged and returned to us at the same time.

Under arrangements made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel HATCHET, to the outer buoy, where he was met by General Commissary last night at three o'clock.

The course was, arrangements were made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel MULFORD's fleet, comprising some eight or ten vessels, are now lying outside of the harbor preparatory to receiving prisoners. Another fair of ships will be sent out to meet the exchange, and the Yankee prisoners.

A number of officers are on board Fort Sumter, will probably be exchanged and returned to us at the same time.

Under arrangements made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel HATCHET, to the outer buoy, where he was met by General Commissary last night at three o'clock.

The course was, arrangements were made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel MULFORD's fleet, comprising some eight or ten vessels, are now lying outside of the harbor preparatory to receiving prisoners. Another fair of ships will be sent out to meet the exchange, and the Yankee prisoners.

A number of officers are on board Fort Sumter, will probably be exchanged and returned to us at the same time.

Under arrangements made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel HATCHET, to the outer buoy, where he was met by General Commissary last night at three o'clock.

The course was, arrangements were made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel MULFORD's fleet, comprising some eight or ten vessels, are now lying outside of the harbor preparatory to receiving prisoners. Another fair of ships will be sent out to meet the exchange, and the Yankee prisoners.

A number of officers are on board Fort Sumter, will probably be exchanged and returned to us at the same time.

Under arrangements made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel HATCHET, to the outer buoy, where he was met by General Commissary last night at three o'clock.

The course was, arrangements were made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel MULFORD's fleet, comprising some eight or ten vessels, are now lying outside of the harbor preparatory to receiving prisoners. Another fair of ships will be sent out to meet the exchange, and the Yankee prisoners.

A number of officers are on board Fort Sumter, will probably be exchanged and returned to us at the same time.

Under arrangements made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel HATCHET, to the outer buoy, where he was met by General Commissary last night at three o'clock.

The course was, arrangements were made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel MULFORD's fleet, comprising some eight or ten vessels, are now lying outside of the harbor preparatory to receiving prisoners. Another fair of ships will be sent out to meet the exchange, and the Yankee prisoners.

A number of officers are on board Fort Sumter, will probably be exchanged and returned to us at the same time.

Under arrangements made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel HATCHET, to the outer buoy, where he was met by General Commissary last night at three o'clock.

The course was, arrangements were made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel MULFORD's fleet, comprising some eight or ten vessels, are now lying outside of the harbor preparatory to receiving prisoners. Another fair of ships will be sent out to meet the exchange, and the Yankee prisoners.

A number of officers are on board Fort Sumter, will probably be exchanged and returned to us at the same time.

Under arrangements made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel HATCHET, to the outer buoy, where he was met by General Commissary last night at three o'clock.

The course was, arrangements were made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel MULFORD's fleet, comprising some eight or ten vessels, are now lying outside of the harbor preparatory to receiving prisoners. Another fair of ships will be sent out to meet the exchange, and the Yankee prisoners.

A number of officers are on board Fort Sumter, will probably be exchanged and returned to us at the same time.

Under arrangements made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

Colonel HATCHET, to the outer buoy, where he was met by General Commissary last night at three o'clock.

The course was, arrangements were made for a combined exchange of prisoners off this harbor.

</